An additional mode, Pokemon-Amy, allows interact with your Pokemon with a touchscreen and 3DS 3DS Camera. Pokemon X and Pokemon Y were first shown on January 8, 2013 by Nintendo in the Nintendo Direct 2013 presentation, as well as the first gameplay footage. They will be the first games in the main series for Nintendo 3DS and the first to be presented with full 3D graphics. Nintendo announced plans to release worldwide (the first in a series to be released everywhere at the same time) on October 12, 2013. Features: Full 3D gameplay: Unlike any other games in the main series, Pokemon X and Y have a fully three-dimensional gameplay style, and 3D simulated characters and creatures are used rather than sprites, as has always been done in the main series. The combat system is aesthetically rebuilt, showing a more lively response to attacks, such as when Pokemon are being hit. Transport: Players can now walk on an 8-point grid, allowing diagonal movement, as opposed to the four-way grid in previous games. The player now has the ability to roller, at least under certain conditions, and has been shown to allow the player to grind and overcome obstacles. Gohaat and Rihorn can drive in certain places and allow the player to interact with the environment, destroying rocks and crossing broken paths. Player Search System: Player Search System (PSS) is a multiplayer feature that allows people to connect, fight and trade with other players over the Internet. It uses the lower screen and allows the player to look for other people playing both globally and locally. Pokemon-Amy: Pokemon-Amy is a new feature that allows the player to develop stronger connections with their Pokemon. It uses a touch screen to allow players to pat, feed and play with Pokemon currently on their team. Players can interact with their Pokemon, petting or feeding them through a touch screen or simulating their movements with a camera. Sky Battles: Sky Battles are battles that are limited to flying Pokemon, although some Pokemon with Levitate can enter. These airborne battles take place against coaches standing far away, for example, on the rocks. Horde Encounters: You can now encounter several wild Pokemon at once. Up to five wild Pokemon will fight against one of the player's Pokemon. These fights offer a lot of experience. Some attacks, such as Rock Slide, are shown to have hit all five opposing Pokemon. However, after turning the player, their Pokemon must withstand the attacks of all five opposing Pokemon. New type: One new type was introduced, Fairy Type. This type was added to balance the type of Dragon that was previously only weak for itself and The Ice. Although it is known that Fairy-type attacks are strong against the Dragon type, it is not known which other types he is strong or weak against. It is also unknown what types of Pokemon like Fairy are resisting. Gyms: X and Y will feature gyms like any other mainstream series Gym seen in Nintendo Direct trailer features female hero hero on a floating platform that turns into a room. The first leader of the gym is Viola, which specializes in the type of bug. New Pokemon: Currently, 26 new Pokemon have been confirmed for X and Y. The total number of new Pokemon to be released is currently unknown. The first Pokemon identified were Chespin, Fennekin, Froaki, Xerneas and Iveltal on January 8, 2013.
